Two columns

The first column starts here and runs down the left half of the page. It is long enough to wrap over many lines, so the gutter between the columns stays clear from top to bottom.

A second paragraph in the first column, with more words to fill its lines up to the gutter and down the page a little further.

The second column starts at the top of the right half. Its text is read after all of the first column, never line by line across the gutter.

The last paragraph of the second column ends the page.